"Zombies" crowd the stage in auditorium C of the Lansing Center on Sunday, Oct. 16 to pose for a group photo after the seventh annual Downtown Lansing Zombie Walk. The event typically draws over 100 attendees. While the event is free, organizers encourage participants to bring a food donation to benefit the Greater Lansing Food Bank. Co-coordinator Emily Emersen said the event is becoming more and more popular each year. "It's a lot of fun to dress up spooky, moan and groan, and kick off the Halloween season," Emersen said.

Zombie Walk participants descend stairs from Shiawassee Street to the Lansing River Trail as the walk nears its end on Oct. 16 in Lansing. The walk began and ended at the Lansing Center.

A decorated SUV is shown parked along Michigan Avenue during the Zombie Walk. The vehicle belonged to a family of five who all participated in the event.
